ASCE's State Report Card Program

ASCE's state report card program is an excellent way for engineers to learn the basics of government and infrastructure policies affecting their projects. When you volunteer with your state's report card, ASCE Government Relations staff helps guide you through the report card process along with training to help tell the story of your state's infrastructure to the public, media, and government officials. There are also built-in opportunities to network with colleagues in the public and private sectors.

Please email reportcard@asce.org to inquire about joining a state report card committee.

As ASCE looks ahead to its 175th anniversary, plans are in the works for a large conference and expo to debut in 2027. The event would consolidate many of the organization's various institute annual conferences into a single-tent offering for all who work in the architecture, engineering, and construction industry.
